A graph showing the relationship between the number of threads running at a single VM and the `fsync()` latency in milliseconds. The y-axis represents the latency in milliseconds, while the x-axis represents the number of threads running at the VM. The graph indicates a linear increase in latency as the number of threads increases.